

This trip is for the BIRDS!

That's right. You will have every opportunity to explore the spring migration waypoint along Lake Erie's southern shore in northwestern Ohio. Birders from across the world make this pilgrimage just to be able to see the birds feeding low in the branches. Warblers galore! Nashville, Black-throated Greens, Black-and-whites, Yellow, Cape May, Black-throated Blues, Wilson's, Prothonotary, and the list goes on and on!

You'll explore the shoreline, the marsh and wooded areas in search of every bird that is passing through, as well as, those present year-round. The exploration is at your own

What to expect: Weather and Sightings

The areas along Lake Erie are chilled by the breezes. Bring along rain/cold gear, water resistant shoes/boots and a pair of binoculars, . This is a great opportunity for experienced and novice birders as well as avid outdoors folks to experience vast numbers of birds!

Hone up on your ability to recognize the field markings of the birds on the list found on the Black Swamp Bird Observatory website. Some folks use this trip as an opportunity to check into a nice pair of
